THE FOG—Fog leads a short life. This batch of Mother Nature's pea soup was on Crab Orchard from the warm sun, mortal enemy of all fog. But in the end, as always happens, the sun won out and Lake and it was on the lam. It was trying to hide and the fog was gone.

Rate hikes, spending cuts proposed

Housing balances budget

By Scott Canon
Staff Writer

The University administration has combined on-campus housing rate increases with expenditure cutbacks to come up with a balanced housing budget to be submitted to the Board of Trustees in November.

The budget is a revision of initial estimates that were presented to the Undergraduate Student Organization and the Graduate Student Council earlier this month. The initial budget was not balanced and didn't include rate hikes or expenditure reductions. However, at that time Bruce Swinburne, vice president for student affairs, told student representatives that rate hikes and cutbacks would be necessary to balance the budget.

Most of the proposed cutbacks are in the area of building maintenance. Work on the roof of Wright Hall, new curtains for the food service halls, and various painting projects, have been cut from the budget.

Lawrence Juhlin, assistant vice president for student affairs, said those projects will be put off until the University can afford them.

Swinburne said another way costs will be cut is by closing East Campus residence halls during the summer. Thompson Point will house summer school students and food service for those residents will be supplied through the Student Center.

The new budget asks for board approval of a $200 increase in the dormitory rate, from $1,792 to $1,992 a year.

Rent at Small Group Housing would rise $47 per person a semester and at Southern Hills, monthly charges would go up $19-$22, depending on the size of the apartment. At Evergreen Terrace the rent for two- and three-bedroom apartments would go up $27 and $28 a month. Monthly rents at Elizabeth Apartments and University Court would increase $20.

Juhlin said the increases are caused by spiraling salary, food and utility costs.

Swinburne, Juhlin, and University Housing Director Sam Rineella met with students last week to gain input on the budget.

Representatives from the USO, the GSC and the house councils, approved the budget but voiced concern about not having had a hand in formulating the budget earlier.

Even with the rate hikes and cutbacks in building maintenance, the University will have to use money from a housing reserve fund to balance the budget, Juhlin said. The fund is made up of revenue the University adds every year for emergency repairs.

"We're taking more money out of the reserve funds this year than we're putting in," Juhlin said.

Decision expected soon on hostages

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP)—The speaker of Iran's Parliament said Monday it will decide in the "next two or three days" on conditions for release of the 52 U.S. hostages and that he thinks it unlikely the Americans will be tried as spies.

Iranian revolutionary leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, meanwhile, agreed to allow a war mediation committee of Islamic heads of state to visit Iran, Tehran radio said.

Khomeini stipulated the group was to be confined to "investigating the criminal invasion," he said, was ordered by Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, according to the radio broadcast. But acceptance of the delegation, even on a conditional basis, was seen as a small step toward solution of the four-week-old Iran-Iraq war at the head of the Persian Gulf.

In a telephone interview from Tehran with The Associated Press here, speaker Hashem Rafsanjani said the war was not affecting the hostages, who have been held since Nov. 4, and that he thought the conditions for their release would be the same as those stated earlier by Khomeini.

Last month Khomeini said the United States must return the late shah's wealth, cancel claims against Iran, release frozen Iranian funds and guarantee non-interference in Iran. He omitted an often-stated demand that the United States apologize for past ties with the late shah's regime.

The Majlis, empowered by Khomeini to decide the fate of the hostages "will in the next few days announce its decision," Rafsanjani said.

Although some hardline members of Parliament have called for spy trials for at least some of the hostages, the speaker said he thought it would be "a very remote possibility."

The militants who seized the U.S. Embassy in Tehran nearly a year ago called it a "spy nest."

Asked if he thought the hostages would be released, Rafsanjani said, "If America accepts our conditions, yes."

Observers in the United States considered as a possible new condition remarks made in New York Saturday by Iranian Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai, who sought removal of U.S. radar planes from Saudi Arabia.

In an AP interview Monday, Rafsanjani said, "What Mr. Rajai meant was that the United States must show its good will for the Islamic revolution because the Iranian people know the United States as their enemy."

Inmates made no threats in letters, attorney says

The Marion Prisoners Rights Project has received no letters from inmates at the Marion federal penitentiary threatening other inmates, A. Jeffrey Weiss, MPRP attorney, said Monday.

Weiss said a story in Monday's issue of the Daily Egyptian incorrectly quoted an MPRP spokesperson as saying there would be resentment and possible violence by striking inmates against inmates who chose to return to work. About 15 percent of the prison's 320 inmates returned to work last week after a work stoppage that began a month ago.

"Letters received by the Marion Prisoners Rights Project from inmates at the penitentiary have not contained any threats of retaliation or violence against any inmate who desires to return to work," Weiss said. "There is no indication that inmates returning to work need to be housed separately for their own protection."

The MPRP had reported last week of receiving copies of a memo, reportedly issued to inmates by prison officials, stating that inmates returning to work would be housed separately if necessary.

SIU chiefs oil administrative machine

By John Ambrosia
Staff Writer

Chancellor Kenneth Shaw and President Albert Somit are two of the most influential and highest paid administrators at SIU-C.

They also both wish their jobs weren't necessary.

Shaw and Somit call themselves "necessary evils"—important parts of a large bureaucratic structure at the University which regulate the operation of a $150 million dollar, 23,000 student educational institution.

Shaw said that because of SIU-C's size, a "super-structure" had to be created to meet the various needs encountered in the operation of a university.

"We have many needs. For example we need to be active in trying to get federal funds, which are important to many academic and administrative areas," Shaw said. "We want those funds available, but it's going to take a super-structure to get them. We have to have our bureaucratic system."

"Twenty years ago we didn't even have the opportunity to get the federal funds we can now,"

BUREAUCRACY:
A necessary evil?

he said. "Now how can you get those funds, in a funding world which has become more complex, without adding something to your system? We have been growing and we will continue to grow."

Somit said the University's structure, because of the nature of bureaucracy, has received negative connotations from students and employees. He added that although the system may not be the best available, it is better than any existing alternatives.

"One thing people have to get used to is that in any kind of human social activities, there has to be a structure," he said. "On the one hand, that bureaucracy created from necessity can be bad. But without that bureaucracy, the alternative may be undesirable."

"Bureaucracy can at times be rude, discourteous and disinterested," Somit said. "And if you run up against it it can be at times overpowering and very slow. It is also another term for administrative structure."

Shaw said the reason administrative bureaucracy has a bad connotation is students and employees take day-to-day procedures for granted and notice only when something goes wrong in dealings with the system.

"There are many advantages to SIU's system that are hidden from students such as the purchasing office, the public relations arm and the financial arm which prepares the

Third-party nominees have little hope in '80

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first in a two-part series about American third parties. Part 2 on Wednesday will be about third parties in the upcoming general election.

By Karen Gull
Staff Writer

Dateline: Washington D.C., Nov. 4, 2005.

"Popular vote totals in the presidential race show the Democratic and Republican candidates in a tie—for second place. With only 22 percent of the popular vote each, the Democrats and Republicans are being defeated by the American People's party, one of 40 fringe parties on the ballot," reads the top story of a major American newspaper.

The paper's editorial page reads "American voters, distraught over eight years marked by fuel shortages and a 30 percent inflation rate under a Democratic president, are rebelling against the two-party system by electing a third-party candidate."

This scene may be in America's political future, but a third-party presidential victory is 1980 is unlikely, political scientists say. Five fringe party candidates have entered the presidential race, but the election appears to be a two-party contest between Democrat Jimmy Carter and Republican Ronald Reagan. Independent John Anderson is struggling to keep 15 percent of the popular vote.

News Analysis

"Independent and third-party candidates have always been around," said John Jackson, associate dean of the Graduate School and political scientist. "But a third-party candidate hasn't been elected in 120 years, since Abraham Lincoln in 1860. And no one in the current crop of political contenders is another Abe Lincoln."

Third-party candidates usually play a minor role in presidential elections, but there have been exceptions. For instance, in 1912 the Progressive Party, headed by renegade Republican Theodore Roosevelt, captured 27 percent of the popular vote. In 1924 a new Progressive Party, this time headed by Robert M. LaFollette, had 17 percent of the popular vote. But the party lost its momentum in American politics until 1948 when it resurfaced, this time without the wide support it had gained in the 1920s.

The American Independent Party of 1968 gained support when, under the leadership of George Wallace, the party carried five Southern states, gained 46 electoral votes and won 13 percent of the popular vote. Since 1968, however, the number of third parties has increased but their support has decreased. In 1976 for example, 35 parties entered candidates in the presidential race, but their combined votes amounted to less than 2 percent of the popular vote.

Third parties are usually formed during periods of intense national conflict, political scientists say. In his book, "Third Parties in Presidential Elections," political researcher Daniel Mazmanian wrote that when a limited number of extremely important issues divide the electorate, an estranged and intense minority forms. This minority is highly susceptible to the appeals of a third party, and Mazmanian cites as an example the American Independent Party and its support from the peace and civil rights movements.

Today, third party support seems to fit Mazmanian's theory. The Citizens and Libertarian parties, for example, advocate a phase out of nuclear energy and elimination of the military draft, thus aligning themselves with minor yet intense anti-nuke and anti-draft movements. Sidney Lens, Citizens Party senatorial candidate in Illinois, said about his party, "We are beginning a crusade. We want to gather the different single-issue groups together and be the voice of progressive movements."

Court won't hear custody case

By the Associated Press

The Supreme Court, over vigorous dissents, refused on Monday to help an Illinois woman who lost custody of her children because she has a live-in boyfriend.

By a 6-3 vote, the court left intact an Illinois Supreme Court ruling that gave custody of Jacqueline Jarrett's three daughters to her ex-husband. Mrs. Jarrett's appeal fell one vote short of the four needed to grant full Supreme Court review of her case. Justices William Brennan Jr., Thurgood Marshall and Harry Blackmun voted to hear her arguments.

In a dissenting opinion, Brennan chastised the high court for allowing the use of Illinois' fornication law to create a presumption of harm to the children.

Fornication is a legal term to describe sexual relations between persons not married to each other. Such relations are outlawed in many states.

Carter, Reagan debate format set

WASHINGTON (AP) — Negotiators for President Carter and Ronald Reagan agreed Monday on a format for a presidential debate but were unable to settle on a date and place. It appeared that the differences were not likely to scuttle a debate.

"We were willing to give them any date between Oct. 28 and Nov. 3," said James Baker, a Reagan adviser. "They prefer the 26th."

But Baker said the differences could be resolved later Monday in a telephone conference. The talks were held in the Washington offices of the League of Women Voters, the proposed sponsors of the debate.

Baker and two other Reagan advisers met with Carter campaign organizers for more than four hours, reaching agreement only on a debate format. The details were not disclosed.

V.P. search committee to form soon

By Michael Monson
Staff Writer

The formation of a search committee to find a vice president for academic affairs and research should be complete within a week, Richard Millman, assistant to the president, said Monday.

Millman said each of the seven campus constituency groups have given their nominations for the search committee to President Albert Somit, who is evaluating the nominees to ensure the makeup of the committee meets affirmative action standards and is equally balanced among the colleges.

Violated oath of office

According to Millman, Somit will select 14 or 15 members to serve on the committee—nine from constituency group nominees and four or five from at-large appointments. Millman said each constituency group has nominated two or more candidates so as to give Somit flexibility in selecting the committee.

The Faculty Senate and Graduate Council will each receive two positions on the search committee because "they are the two constituency groups most intimately concerned with academics," Millman said.

The vice president for academic affairs and research post has been open since June 15 when Frank Horton left to become chancellor at the University of Wisconsin at Milwaukee. John Guyon, former dean of the Graduate School, is serving as acting vice president.

Millman said he expects the search for a new vice president to be conducted nationally and to be completed sometime between July 1 and Aug. 15. He said the committee chairman will be elected by the committee members.

Millman said Somit will not participate actively in the selection process until the committee invites several finalists to SIU-C for interviews.

After the interviews, in which Somit will play an active part, Millman said the committee will give Somit a list of the top finalists and Somit will make the final selection from the list.

Generally, the search committee would select three candidates to submit to Somit, Millman said. But he added that "These things are fluid. They could give him four names or they could give him two. The committee will recommend the top-flight candidates."

Millman said the vice president for academic affairs and research is the chief academic officer of the University and is responsible for overseeing that "the faculty are encouraged to perform all their duties in instruction, research and tenure."

"It's a critically important position to the University," Millman said.

Guns found in suitcases of ex-student

A former SIU-C student was arrested Saturday at Lambert International Airport in St. Louis for allegedly attempting to smuggle 28 handguns and ammunition for the guns to Nigeria.

Nnamdi Okanu, 26, originally from Nigeria, was arrested Saturday afternoon by agents of the U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms as he attempted to board a jet to Lagos, Nigeria, by way of London, an official of the U.S. Magistrate's office in St. Louis said. The weapons were discovered in two suitcases Okanu was carrying.

The official said Okanu is being charged with knowingly and willfully exporting handguns illegally. A preliminary hearing in U.S. District Court in St. Louis has been set for Friday, and Okanu has been released after posting $500 bail, the official said.

Okanu was enrolled at SIU-C as a graduate student in community development in fall of 1979.

Opponent: Simon should be impeached

By Dean Athans
Staff Writer

Jim Barrett, the 24th District independent congressional candidate, said Monday that incumbent Paul Simon should be impeached for "violation of his oath of office," and that the primary issue in the campaign was "whether Simon deserves to be re-elected."

Barrett, the conservative Constitution Party candidate, criticized Simon for tripling Social Security taxes and opposing "a stronger national defense."

He also said that Simon and six other congressmen were "indicted" in 1977 by the National Justice Foundation of America for violating their oath of office "by exceeding their authority and betraying the trust invested in them by the people of the United States." He said he agrees with the Board of Directors of the foundation, which called for Simon's impeachment.

During the press conference at Williamson County Airport, Barrett was asked who the Board of Directors were and what the Justice Foundation was. He said, "lawyers in California."

He later elaborated by explaining that the foundation was made up of a group of lawyers opposed to the signing of the Declaration of Interdependence in 1976.

According to a press release from the Foundation, the Declaration calls for the "distribution of the natural resources and public lands of the United States" and charges that "the Congressmen have undertaken to promote policies which affirm that (natural resources) are not our heritage, but that they belong to all nations and peoples of the world. This is contrary to the oath of office..."

However, Paul Morrill, Simon's campaign manager, said the Declaration was organized by an historian as part of the Bicentennial.

"It tried to get prominent people to get together to sign a Declaration recognizing that, in addition to being sovereign, we should be cooperating with other countries. It expressed the ideal that we are not an island in the world...but it has had no effect on our sovereignty and the other things Barrett reads into it," Morrill said.

Barrett said that voters are ready for "common sense and Americanism" not the "present system of socialism."

Barrett added, "If I wasn't on the ballot this year, I'd have to vote for Simon again."

Morrill said after the press conference that Barrett "underestimates the intelligence of voters." He said Barrett is not addressing issues but creating them.

"He hasn't got any concrete plans and offers no viable alternative to what Paul has already done."

Hemphill suit may have far-reaching impact

The importance of injured football player Mark Hemphill filing a workman's compensation claim cannot be understated.

Hemphill claims that because he was an athlete on scholarship providing a service to the University, he should be eligible for workman's compensation. The scholarship, he claims, is the equivalent of pay; therefore, he should be eligible for compensation.

The suit was heard before Illinois Industrial Commission Arbitrator Ray Duity. "The final decision should come from the commission within 90 days of receiving a preliminary decision from Duity.

The decision on this claim may have far-reaching effects on the world of college sports.

If the courts were to grant that claim, the impact could be to destroy the entire idea of amateurism. If the University, as Hemphill claims, were paying him for his services, he would no longer be an amateur athlete. He would be a professional.

The issue in this suit involves more than just one football player at one university. The effects of this decision will reach to all schools with football programs and potentially to any school giving scholarships to athletes.

Whether or not Hemphill's claim gets approval is secondary to the effect the decision could have on amateurism. For that reason, all schools that offer sports scholarships should keep a close watch on the outcome of this claim.

Amateur athletics could be at stake.

'Fruitless' pleasures are OK

This letter is addressed to Mr. David Byrne, who was so kind to give us a piece of his mind on the subject of homosexual vs. heterosexual lifestyles. Notwithstanding his claim of "sympathy and benevolence" toward gay people, his letter smacked of condescendence and self-righteousness.

Although I don't personally share a gay person's particular object of attention, I find myself in total agreement as to his/her basic philosophy toward life in general and sex in particular. I confess that I, too, often indulge with relish in several pleasures that are admittedly "fruitless," whether it be drinking, going to a movie, or making love to my wife.

To claim that the only admissible pleasures should be the ones that bear tangible results would undoubtedly give me deep feelings of guilt and lead me to the sad conclusion that for most of my life I've been not only irresponsible, but even, according to Mr. Byrne's own choice of words, illogical. Mea culpa!

I wonder if fruits (no pun intended) are the only things on Mr. Byrne's mind when he engages in his own pleasurable activities? I, for one, will continue to waste my life seeking pleasures (my, doesn't that sound depraved!) that provide no further benefit than enjoyment and relaxation.

By the way, what makes Mr. Byrne believe that love for a child can only come as a necessary consequence of procreation? I'm sure that adopted children and their families could give him a piece of their minds on that subject.

Reviewers ignore local bands

I am outraged! How does the De music staff justify their feeble attempts at reviewing the albums of international artists? Their lack of insight make the reviews almost comical.

Why don't they stick to the music performed in the Carbondale area, but not just the concerts at the Arena or Shryock? At least 15 bands will play up on the strip this weekend, not to mention the parties that have live bands

Unfortunately the DE chooses to ignore this facet of the music spectrum. I think it stems from the fact that they spend more time in the record stores than they spend listening to the live music available in town.

They would provide a much greater service to the students by reviewing the local talent, rather than insulting us with their inane egotistical rumblings.—Kurt Boyle, USO Student Advocate 'Status of women' article good, but...

I am writing concerning your article on the status of women. I compliment your paper on its concern and awareness of the progress of women in the world today.

However, your failure to mention or include outstanding black women achievers has left me, and I am sure others, with the thought that black women are either non-existent or have made no forward advancement.

Such outstanding achievers as Lillie Lockhart, Center for Basic Skills, Norma Ewing, Special Education, Janet Helms, Psychology, Jean Dorsett-Robinson, Quality of Life Services and Ella Lacey, assistant professor, School of Medicine, for example, were not included.

For those women who are black and have achieved, their achievements have double implications: they have faced a double jeopardy—being black and being a woman. Their experiences and achievements, I am sure, can be inspirational to all women.—Doris Cross, Project Upward Bound

Jailing Peltier was atrocity

It is interesting to see how faultless people view the judicial system. Even when it creates an absolute atrocity like jailing Leonard Peltier, a rapidly rising figure in the American Indian Movement, for the crime of trying to protect the mineral-rich Indian land that the American government, behind the facade of law and order, as unscrupulously practiced by the FBI, is trying to steal.

It is equally interesting seeing how the government wants to honor the treaties set by our forefathers in regard to the American Indian only when the government can profit by it. But when the treaty benefits the Indian, then it's time to wipe out the treaty and try to pass bills in Congress making them so-called "equal citizens."

What is not only interesting but also twice as scary is how we are to tell our children that questioning the government motives, questioning the FBI, and questioning President Jimmy Carter's human rights policy can result in punishment, especially for Indian children. Not an easy task.

What I find particularly sad is that Leonard Peltier is not a vicious savage but is being treated as one, probably because the image of the American Indian in nearly a century of movies and dime novels has been portrayed as such. And that isn't true in the least.

Leonard Peltier is a kind human being. When he talks about his people, he is talking about all peace-loving people no matter what color. And in his writing he shows he cares about how the extremist right-wingers taking over this land are telling people where to live, who to fight, and not to complain.

Are we to let Leonard Peltier face the unjust consequences of trying to lead us all into a better way, a more free way of life? Do we sit back and forget it all? Let's support this man and his just cause by attending the meetings held in his and the red man's behalf. It can't hurt, it can only help all of us.—Kevin L. Palermo, alumnus, Park Forest

don't need a cult

pulling in lonely

Another cult appearance is all we need in Carbondale. The Hare Krishna center so near the SIU campus has the possibility of sucking in some lonely souls under false pretenses.

The Moonies did not advance far by soliciting stuffed animals some weeks ago. More sophisticated means have to be tried by Hare Krishna, similar to the Indian culture of 1400 B.C.

All cults have the same pattern: catch the souls, brainwash them and let them support the devoted staff for the rest of their lives.

Why are you setting up a Krishna Consciousness Center? Are you devoted to people's welfare or to their money?

I would recommend that you interview the hard-working Indian faculty and student population here in town before you make a fool of yourself.—Gahni Nehra, Carbondale

Clark's foreign policy idiotic

I am really amazed at some of the opinions expressed in the DE. James G. O'Connell seems to be rather misinformed on some of the basic facts of recent history.

South Korea in 1950 was a defenseless democracy undergoing a totally unprovoked attack by the communist North. If Mr. O'Connell could have had his way, the United States would have stood by and watched the South Koreans slaughtered. Instead, the United States sought to uphold the principles of freedom which it also fought for in 1776.

Mr. O'Connell also agrees with the Ed Clark idea of a total military withdrawal of all U.S. forces abroad. This is stupid, naive and very dangerous. Clark believes that this would inspire other countries to also withdraw their respective forces. The only event that a unilateral American withdrawal would "inspire" is a Russian advance into Western Europe, the Middle East and Southeast Asia.

This is not a nice world. Mr. O'Connell. Be realistic. This country may not have a perfect foreign policy record, but as cliché as it sounds the United States is still the only nation strong enough to defend the free world.

One more point. You mention a strong United Nations tactical military force to keep the Persian Gulf open. Brilliant. Has it occurred to you that the U.S. is the only country (except Russia) with the naval capability to do this? All other nations in the U.N. would be totally and completely ineffective in such an undertaking.

Yet you want American forces kept out of the Gulf. I don't think Iran and/or Iraq would be fooled by the U.S.S. Nimitz flying a U.N. flag. You are arguing against yourself. That's probably good because anyone who would support Ed Clark's idiotic foreign policy proposals will find himself with an audience of one.—Chris Cashen, senior, Psychology

Grad student handbooks available

By Carol Knowles
Staff Writer

A graduate student handbook and a graduate and professional student newsletter are two new sources of information available to keep students up to date on University policies and events.

The handbook is geared toward beginning and continuing graduate students at SIU-C, according to Debbie Brown, president of the Graduate Student Council.

"It is an attempt to make available information that departments within the University tend to obscure or don't make available," Brown said.

More than 3,000 handbooks were printed by the University's Printing and Duplicating Service at a cost of $2,500. Money for the project came from the GSC and the Graduate School. The handbooks were to be distributed in mid-September, but a production backup at the printing service prevented distribution, an employee of the Printing and Duplicating Service said.

Handbooks are available in the GSC office, located on the third floor of the Student Center. Plans are also in the works to distribute the handbooks to new graduate students before they come to campus.

Information on student services, financial aid, assistantships and the community are some of the topics covered in the handbook.

Ricardo Caballero, editor, said the handbook "intends to break new grounds by providing a measure of humor while communicating vital information." He said that the handbook is not intended to be comprehensive, but should be used along with the Graduate Catalog and other publications.

The graduate and professional student newsletter, edited by Maydean Worley, graduate student in speech pathology and audiology, is a summary of minutes of meetings of the GSC and Graduate Council. It also lists announcements concerning committee memberships, seminars, scholarships and other announcements of interest to graduate and professional students.

Money for the project is coming out of the administrative budget of the GSC, as long as money holds out.

The newsletter is available through departmental executive officers and at the GSC office.

'All That Jazz'

to be theme of fair

Despite University regulations prohibiting animals inside buildings, a horse will make an appearance at this year's Activities Fair sponsored by the SIU-C Office of Student Development.

Activities Fair '80, with the theme, "All That Jazz," will be held on Wednesday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. in Student Center Ballrooms C and D.

Chrisanne Blankenship, student orientation chairman in the Office of Student Development, said the fair is a recruitment activity for recognized student organizations and a means of acquainting students with all the activities available to them on campus.

Booths and demonstration areas will be set up in the ballrooms. The horse will be provided by the Saluki Saddle Club. Other demonstrations include the Jazz Big Band, the Fencing Club, and a remote broadcast from WIDB radio.

Old 13 to close for repairs

Old Illinois Route 13 will be closed to through traffic beginning Tuesday from Illinois Route 148 to the intersection of new and old Route 13 in Carterville, according to the Illinois Department of Transportation.

IDOT officials said the closing will last from 8 a.m. Tuesday until Wednesday evening.

Repair crews from the Crab Orchard and Egyptian Railroad will rebuild the railroad crossing just east of the SIU School of Technical Careers.

People who live within the closed-off section will have access to the road, but the railroad crossing will be closed to all traffic.

'The Maids' becomes savage nightmare

By Angela LaMaster
Student Writer

Dan Plato's direction of "The Maids," performed this weekend in the Laboratory Theater, took what was once an avant-garde concept of theater a step further and produced a 1980s model—one which audiences may finally be ready for.

Jean Genet's 1947 play has been described as ritualistic, sometimes to indicate that his plays are not straightforward narratives. Instead, actions are repeated obsessively and the audience is often not certain where reality begins and ends for the characters, if it exists at all.

In preserving the ritualistic aspects of the play, Plato created a 1980s version; a savage nightmare that suggests game structure and dream logic as much as it invokes a strict definition of ritual.

"The Maids" is "about" two maids who loathe-love both their mistress and themselves. The maids switch between the roles of themselves and the mistress: Solange the maid becomes Claire the maid and Claire dresses in the mistress's clothes; playing at being the mistress. The real Madame, though her role-within-a-role is more subtle, is as fake, as non-real, as the maids themselves. In this context of unreality, the characters heap contempt and tainted love on each other in a matrix of ritual, game and social contract.

While "The Maids" is something of a period piece—existentialism is no longer at the forefront of intellectual thought—Plato's conception may have more meaning for a current audience than the original could have had in the late '40s. Plato wisely chose to present the piece in 1940s dress. After all, who has maids any more; particularly in America? Yet this bit of fiction clearly indicates that the characters are outcasts in a modern sense.

Review

Despite the period styling of the play, the fragmentation of the action and dialogue and the non-linear rituals resonate even more insistently in the contemporary mind, so similar is it to the experience of life.

A huge mirror in the set also helps the audience to understand the fake or unreal quality of the characters—the mirror is made of an opaque, non-reflective material.

Plato's conception was demanding of the audience. With the assistance of three gifted actresses, the audience was forced to surrender their moorings to reality, to give up the search for a linear plot. Once unhinged, the audience was free to respond to the lushness of Genet's language.

If some members of the audience emerged exhausted, the actresses must have collapsed after the performance. Their task, playing roles-within-roles-within roles, was a draining one and they brought to it 90 minutes of nonstop manic energy. Perhaps the greatest triumph of the actresses—Jeanne Gilbert as Solange, Sherrie Stricklin as Claire and Diane Timmerman as Madame—was the clear articulation of the several roles each character played. Although the role-shifting required an almost-impossible quickness of response, the actresses portrayed each role in a breakneck pace with crystalline clarity and without blurring.

The actresses performed fearlessly. While some roles in other plays require the enactment of a fiction, often a pretty one, these roles required a descent into hell. At the moment when real physical violence occurs between Claire and Solange, the question of what is real becomes pressing: dramatic action suddenly becomes real action. The daring, reckless total commitment of the actresses in this scene underscored Genet's theme of the beatifying qualities of evil.

The play, dealing as it does with outcasts, social class and identity (or lack of it), seems uncannily timely; much more so than it might have seemed when the Living Theater performed it in 1965-66. These elements were giant clichés then instead of the serious social games they have since become.

'The Exterminator' departs from good taste in movies

By Tony Gordon
Staff Writer

Anyone looking for evidence that brain damage will not prevent you from getting a job in the film industry need look no further than "The Exterminator."

A malodorous departure from good taste in entertainment, "The Exterminator" is a psychotic piece of celluloid regurgitation that makes no statement other than that it is still possible for someone to write, produce or direct a film while suffering from the long-term effects of a free-base combination of Sterno and model cement.

What serves as the plot for this film involves two men who return from the Vietnam War to find the streets awash with bad guys. One of the wartime buddies has his spine ripped open with a garden tool by a street gang after he foiled their attempt to steal some beer from a loading dock.

The title hero (played by Robert Ginty, direct from TV's excellent "Paper Chase" to this dreck) embarks on a vigilante campaign of gruesome violence, all graphically depicted, as revenge for his friend's paralysis.

Of the many things that the film does not seek to explain, the Vietnam key to understanding Ginty's behavior is foremost. The movie opens with some not-too-authentic scenes from their combat experiences, with Ginty's buddy saving him from an enemy interrogation after they were captured. It takes a heap of close-quarters killing for the two to escape, but thankfully, the men are equal to

All is well and good up to that point, because all reports from Vietnam indicated that it involved some killing. But when Ginty goes to his friend's hospital bed and explains that machine-gunning one of the gang members and tying two more to a pile of garbage to be gnawed apart by rats "seemed not right or wrong, but just like 'Nam,'" the audience is supposed to accept that justification, braced with a couple of flashbacks, without question.

Of course, we have all been educated on the subject of Vietnam vets by TV cop shows and movies for a long time now. Every last one of them is a walking schizophrenic time bomb who has a stolen M-16 in his closet and a bangalore torpedo under his bed; just waiting for the chance to let loose some unspeakable hell on society for the sins of the jungle.

In the words of a famous veteran of earlier wars—Col. Sherman T. Potter—"bull cookies." The insulting premise that the Vietnam vet is a killer gone beyond control has been used to hold up some of the most disgusting visual s'me for too long now.

It seems to be taken for granted in too many places that the minds of Vietnam veterans are more disfigured by the war than vets of other wars this nation has participated in, even though none were rumored to have been picnics.

"The Exterminator" depicts Ginty's personal war with the criminal element as a series of single-frame savage acts barely tied together by a mindless storyline. Equipped with the niceties from his Pandora's footlocker of armaments, he feeds a Mafia boss into a meat grinder, kills a doberman with an electric carving knife, sets a pimp on fire with lighter fluid and fills in gaps in the action by blasting evildoers with .44 caliber mercury dum-dum loads.

Christopher ("Rat Patrol") George portrays a transparent police detective who comes along to collect what's left of the bodies from Ginty's "good deeds."

"The Exterminator" is a state-of-the-art example of the movie industry's obsession with technicolor necrophilia and should be avoided at all costs.

Perhaps if such schlock outfits as Avco Embassy Pictures, which bears the blame for this trash, takes a financial drubbing large enough for its twisted brains to decode, we will be spared future efforts like "The Exterminator."

Yearbook means work to OBelisk editor

By Pete Knecht
Student Writer

The staff listing in the back of the 1980 OBelisk II, SIU-C's yearbook, said of the assistant art director:

"Genny Behner, 21, hails from Blue Mound, IL. She likes to lay out in the sun, lay out in the rain and even lay out in the snow, but hates to lay out copy."

Since spring semester, Genny has become Genny Jauch and editor of the 1981 OBelisk II. She has even learned to live with laying out copy.

"The biggest part is just getting everything organized," Jauch said at the yearbook office in the green barracks. She sat on a worn couch in the small lounge. "I try to stick my nose in every part of the book and help where I can."

Jauch has an associate degree in commercial graphics. She's currently working toward a bachelor's degree in graphic communication and design while editing the OBelisk.

Eventually, she'd like to go on to do "bold" graphics, like logos, package designs or letterheads.

For now, the OBelisk is giving her valuable resume material. She handles a staff of 10 in six different departments.

"I know a little bit about everything in here, like promotions. I try to get things done as well as I can. I'll put the time into something and get it done."

She has no leftover summer tan. Dark circles are under her green eyes. She wore faded blue jeans and a beige sweater.

Doing sales, meeting deadlines and meeting budgets are part of Jauch's job as editor. She said she often worries about the book, whether it will work out.

"I stick around here a lot. I like to keep busy," Jauch twisted her brown hair. "I like stuff where you're up doing something."

"Studying, going to the library—I don't know how anyone can do that. I'd rather do artwork or organize something."

The yearbook is on Jauch's mind all the time, she said. She's always trying to figure out "what to do here and what to do there."

"I don't even know if I have any hobbies besides art," she leaned her head back against a crackling wall. "I just haven't made the time to do it."

Genny Jauch, a senior in graphic communication and design, is editor of the 1981 OBelisk II.

She is a quiet person around strangers. She can talk to people, she said, but only when they're talking back to her at the same time.

"I don't like to yell at people. That's the hardest part of my job," Jauch pointed and shook her finger. "The only thing that really upsets me is when people don't do their work."

But, "I can yell at Mark," she laughed. Mark, her husband, is an SIU-C graduate student.

The two don't get a chance to see each other much during the week, but, she said, "it works out pretty good."

At night, with Mark, Genny tries not to "take the yearbook home. I talk constantly about it."

Jauch is particular about her classes. She only takes those in subjects she knows she'll use. General studies are "a waste of time." Algebra is out, although speech and ecology are in.

Occasionally, she'll miss a class while working at the yearbook. "I don't think they're that important to me."

"You learn a lot here," Jauch said of the OBelisk. "I enjoy it. I like being around people, and I like being around the people here. I don't like to be by myself very much."

A lot of her work is just common sense, she said. "A lot of it gets to be paperwork. There's a form for everything."

But Jauch doesn't seem to treat her staffers like paper. "I'm not that bossy," she laughed and shook her head.

Bruce Simmons, managing editor, said that last year Jauch "never said, 'do this.' She always asked."

Jauch, a senior, has all her past yearbooks, including ones from high school. She still looks at those old books. "It's kind of just a memory thing."

She smiled. "This yearbook will mean more to me than any other yearbook I have."

We Chiropractors, Auto Injured Deserve Best In Care

BY DR. ROY S. WHITE

Doctor of Chiropractic

Accidental injuries are a fact of life. Unfortunately, too many lives, slips, falls, bumps, bangs, in the home, on the highways, at the job, take their toll daily.

From my vantage point, it was obvious that some special effort must be made to accommodate the care and treatment of accidental injuries. The need for this care is created in the split-second instance of an accident. And the care itself poses different problems by its very nature.

That is why Doctors of Chiropractic have tried to insure competent treatment of acute injuries sustained in accidents.

The working man deserves the best in care. He needs to be able to look for competent, specialized care to get back on the job.

The victim of an automobile accident should seek immediate care. Serious and costly injuries do not always result in immediate pain or bloodshed. A thorough examination following an accident is necessary to insure protection and prevention of long term post accident suffering from seemingly minor or unnoticed injuries.

Whiplash injuries from auto accidents occupy much of the Doctor of Chiropractic's time. This is probably becoming the nation's number one health problem. Whiplash, left untreated, can open a Pandora's Box of troubles, so we've prepared ourselves to treat the problem to the best of our ability.

If you're involved in an accident, whether it be on the job or on the highway, contact a Doctor of Chiropractic for a complete post accident examination.

Do you have a question? Write or call...

Theater construction to begin soon

By Tony Gordon
Staff Writer

Construction of an additional auditorium for the Varsity Theater in downtown Carbondale will soon be underway. Site plans for the Varsity 3, to be added on the north side of the theater's present South Illinois Avenue location, were approved last week by city staff. A building permit is expected to be issued soon, pending approval of the plans by the state fire marshal according to Tom Redmond of the city's Planning Division.

The 3,480-square-foot auditorium will have a seating capacity of 164 and use the present Varsity entrance and exits, Redmond said. Ramps for handicapped access and emergency exits towards the screen area are also planned for the addition. The Varsity Theater is owned by Kerasotes Theaters of Springfield.

Morgan Commercial Structures of Murphysboro will construct the addition. Bruce Fager, a Morgan representative, said that work on the addition will begin as soon as the final permit is issued. Fager estimated that the construction could be completed within 90 days.

The addition will be built on Kerasotes-owned property at 410-416 S. Illinois. Three businesses—Sam's Lock and Key, David F. Low Watch Repair and Leaf and Stem Tobacconists, and the non-profit Christian Science Reading Room—were forced to relocate from their storefront operations on the street for the new auditorium. All three businesses have found new locations.

The tenants were notified of the plans by Kerasotes in early September.

Parents of Russian boy sue U.S.

CHICAGO (AP)—The parents of a 13-year-old Soviet boy who is fighting to stay in the United States sued Monday asking that federal immigration officials retract their order granting him political asylum.

The American Civil Liberties

Union filed the suit on behalf of Michael and Anna Polovchak. In it, they accused the Immigration and Naturalization Service and its Chicago director of "illegally violating the integrity of the family" by granting their son, Walter, political asylum July 19.

Neither INS officials in Chicago or Washington could be reached for comment on the suit.

ACLU lawyer Harvey Grossman said the asylum decision was made in haste. "It was done in a climate of emotionalism—one which did not respect the normal processes of justice."

He said the failure to notify the Polovchaks of their son's action and to allow them a voice in determining his immigration status showed "callous disregard for the rights of these parents."

The action asks $200,000 in damages and a court injunction vacating the asylum order granted a few days after Walter ran away from his parents' home in Chicago last summer.

Two former Daily Egyptian photographers have won third place in the 1980 Inland Daily Press Association photography competition.

The award was for a multiple-page layout in the Nov. 12, 1979 edition of the Daily Egyptian. The photographs, taken at a demonstration in the Student Center cafeteria shortly after the Iranian hostage crisis began, were shot by Dwight Nale and Don Preisler, former staff photographers.

Nale is a staff photographer for the Kankakee (Ill.) Journal and Preisler is working as a staff photographer for the Freeport (Ill.) Journal-Standard.

The Daily Egyptian competed against other newspapers in the under-50,000 circulation category. The awards were announced at the group's annual convention in Chicago.

CHICAGO 7's ABBIE HOFFMAN HEAR HIS STORY

He changed his name
He changed his face but he couldn't change the revolutionary fervor that surrounded him.

• Abbie Hoffman, 1960: Yippie leader and member of the Chicago Seven comes to SIU-C to tell his story.

• Busted for selling cocaine to undercover police, Hoffman jumped bail and began a new underground life under the alias Barry Freed.

• After six years of hiding he surrendered to narcotics prosecutors in September. He is free on bond and awaiting prosecution.

Witnesses sought by sheriff's office in bar shooting

The Jackson County Sheriff's office is looking for witnesses to the shooting of a man in a Murphysboro bar early Saturday morning.

Police said that Hector Zirando, 19, was shot in the upper left leg after he and his friends got into a bottle-throwing and name-calling incident with a group of white males. Police said that one of the white males fired a gun several times, and one of the shots hit Zirando.

The incident occurred at about 4 a.m. at Carries nightclub, as the bar was closing. Police said Zirando was taken to St. Joseph Memorial Hospital in Murphysboro, where he underwent surgery to remove the bullet and is presently listed in good condition.

Police do not have an address for Zirando and are trying to locate witnesses to the incident.

Bureaucracy regulates operation of University budget," Shaw said. "A student could go all the way through here and get a Ph.D. and never see these services."

"But a student does see another part of the system. Such as the custodian in his or her residence hall. They take all this work for granted. And there's nothing wrong with that. But when a faucet is leaking and someone doesn't come out for 10 days to fix it, they blame the 'bad bureaucracy.' And there's nothing wrong with that."

If catchwords reflect the frustrations of a college generation, then cries for peace in 1970 may be being replaced with cries of bureaucracy in 1980. Shaw said. He added that the only way for students to change a non-working bureaucracy is to speak up.

"There are two important parts of any bureaucracy, the unit serving and the people being served," Shaw said. "For that system to work, the serving unit must be responsible, articulate his thoughts and have good, solid policies. Conversely, those being served must be willing to speak up and let us know if we're doing something wrong."

"I don't think people necessarily see all the University's bureaucracy in a bad light," he said. "Fifteen years ago the thing was to say all bureaucracy is wrong. Now I think people just see specific things as bad. But when they see that they have every right to, and they should, do something about it."

Somit said part of speaking out against the system might mean speaking out against the University's top administrative positions.

"It's all right for people to believe that certain jobs are unnecessary because while the jobs aren't unnecessary, they may be necessary evils," he said.

Shaw agreed with Somit's statements about administrative positions, adding that without them the University could not function. "You get up in the morning and you say, 'Yes, I'm an evil,'" Shaw said. "But you hope you're a necessary evil."

Professor's text on death a first

By Steve English
Student Writer

Until recently, the subject of death and dying was one of the more widely ignored topics in the scientific community, according to Robert Russell, professor in health education.

Russell is the coauthor of a recently published book entitled "Coping with Death and Dying." The book is the first of its kind aimed at high school students.

The book tries to familiarize people with death so they will know what to expect when a friend dies, Russell explained.

"The main purpose of the book is to try to relieve some of the discomfort suffered by those experiencing death," he said.

Most books on the subject have been written basically for college courses, Russell said. This book is intended to be a supplemental text, featured as a one-to-three-week unit within certain high school courses.

"This book cannot do away with individual problems that some people have about death and dying," Russell said. "It can do away with problems that can arise through ignorance of the subject. The book does not try to offer opinions, but rather tries to explain things."

Russell's book not only deals with the person directly affected by a death, but also with that person's peers and friends. It tries to explain to them how to relate to their friend's situation. Typically, a person experiencing death wants to talk about it, but no one else wants to talk with that individual about the matter, according to Russell.

"People feel that those experiencing death should be strong and brave," Russell said. "This is wrong. People should let out their feelings instead of holding them back. A person often wants to talk about their loss, but has no one willing to listen."

When experiencing the loss of a loved one, people encounter various problems, according to Russell. Personal loss, self-pity, remorse, guilt and anger are feelings often associated with death, he points out.

"People feel that their lives will change because of death and it scares them," Russell said. "People think that they will live forever, and then someone dies and they ask 'why did this happen?'"

One of the leading experts on death and dying, Russell says, is Elisabeth Kubler-Ross, a psychiatrist and author of several books. She has developed five psychological stages of death and dying.

These emotional stages relate not only to the dying person, but also to those adjusting to the death of a loved one.

Russell devoted a section in his book to explaining these stages which Kubler-Ross identifies as denial, anger, bargaining, depression and acceptance. Not every person goes through all of the stages and the order and lengths vary, Russell said.

"One of Kubler-Ross's strong premises is that death is an aspect of life that should be talked about, faced directly and not hidden," Russell said. "This is something that I try to bring out in my book. Death brings about the realization that you are still alive, and helps you to appreciate the value of life."

Russell's co-author is Candace Purdy, health teacher

Men's net team takes 4th place at Arkansas meet

The Saluki men's tennis team took fourth place in the eight-team University of Arkansas at Little Rock Fall Classic by defeating the host school but losing its next two matches.

SIU-C defeated Arkansas at Little Rock, 7-2. The Salukis lost the first two singles matches, but John Greif, Brian Stanley, Steve Smith and Eric Eberhardt all won at Nos. 3 through 6. The doubles teams of Lito Ampon-Smith, Guy Hooper-Stanley and Eberhardt-Greif were all victorious.

The Salukis lost to Wichita State, 7-2, and to Northeast Louisiana, the defending champion of the Trans-American Conference, 5-4.

SIU-Edwardsville, two-time Division II national champions, won the tournament by defeating Wichita State.

"I'm well pleased with our doubles teams playing a little tougher," Coach Dick LeFevre said. "I'm encouraged that we are improving going into a really tough tournament at Edwardsville next weekend."

That tournament, the Oak Hill Invitational, is an eight-team tournament to be played in flights. No. 1 players together in one bracket and so on. Leading teams are host SIU-E and Clemson, ninth in the nation last year.

Abdul-Jabbar hits 10,000th bucket

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar knows how to make an entrance.

Wearing goggles to protect the eye he injured in an Oct. 12 game against Houston, Abdul-Jabbar returned in style Sunday night—leading the unbeaten Los Angeles Lakers to a 125-107 win over the Golden State Warriors and making the 10,000th field goal of his 12-year National Basketball Association career.

"It looked like we had the game put away with a little while to play and he wanted to go back in," Laker Coach Paul Westhead said. "He's more concerned with his rhythm than getting his 10,000th field goal."

Lady ruggers take 5th place in 16-team Midwest tourney

The SIU-C women's rugby club won three out of four games and captured fifth place over the weekend in the 16-team Midwest Women's Rugby Union tournament in West Lafayette, Ind.

Led by a strong scrum effort and the scoring of backliners Chris Lupica and Barb Cavoto, the SIU-C club upped its record to 5-1 and earned a trip to the national tournament next May.

In Saturday's games, SIU-C was involved in two 24-0 games, winning the first against Kent State and dropping the second to Chicago. In the win over KSU, Cavoto scored three tries. Lupica scored two and Darlene Sedlock scored one.

The loss to Chicago, however, put SIU-C in the consolation bracket. In Sunday's first consolation game, the Larry Werner-coached team defeated Indiana, 16-4, on tries by Lupica, Danae Frick and Shannon Maulding. In the consolation championship, SIU-C shut out Michigan State, 18-0, behind three tries by Lupica, one by Maulding and a conversion kick by Frick.

At the close of the tournament, SIU-C's Lupica, Cavoto and Beth Beyerl were among those players named to a Midwestern all-star team that is scheduled to play other regional teams in late November.

The club's last home game of the fall season will be at 1 p.m. Saturday against St. Louis University on the rugby pitch south of Abe Martin Field.

University Billing/Receivables System

NOTICE TO STUDENTS

A new system for payment of all charges including registration fees and housing has been developed to provide for greater efficiency and improved services as outlined below:

INSTALLMENT PLAN

Effective with registration for the Spring 1981 Semester, payment of tuition and fees can be made in three monthly installments. A $5.00 fee will be charged for use of the installment plan. (To avoid the $5.00 charge, simply pay the full amount due for registration fees.) The installment plan will be most effective for those students who pre-register. Housing payments can still be paid by installments with no additional charge, if paid on time.

MONTHLY BILLING

Beginning October 1980, a monthly billing statement will be sent to your mailing address. This statement will show all the charges to your account for that month as well as payments, financial aid, and other credits. Statements will be prepared on the 15th of each month with payment due before the 15th of the next month. If the amount due is not paid by that date, a service charge of 1% per month will be added to your account.

MAILING ADDRESS

It is important--and your responsibility--to have a current mailing address on file with the University. This may be your local address, your parents' address, or any address most convenient for you. You may report address changes to either the Office of Admissions and Records, the Bursar's Office, or the Office of Student Work and Financial Assistance.

PAY BY MAIL

Payment by mail is encouraged. There is no need to stand in lines to pay charges assessed to you. Your cancelled check will serve as your receipt and your payments made between billings will be reflected on the next billing statement of your account. You can save the cost of a stamp by depositing your payment (in an envelope) in the drop box at the University Avenue entrance to Woody Hall any time, day or night. Drop boxes are also located in Lentz Hall, Trueblood Hall, and Grinnell Hall.

PARTIAL PAYMENTS

The Bursar can now accept partial payments on the total amount you may owe (also see "Cancellation of Registration"). Your payment will be applied to the oldest charges first and you will be charged a 1% per month service charge on the amount unpaid at the next billing date.

FINANCIAL AID CREDITS

Grants such as REOG, SEOG, STS, and private cash scholarships or awards will be credited directly to your account to pay any past balance due as well as amounts due for the current semester. If the amount paid is greater than the amount due, the balance will be mailed by check. Guaranteed State Loans and NDSL checks cannot be directly credited to your account and must still be picked up in the Bursar's Office in person.

REFUNDS

Refunds for registration changes or for charges such as the STS fee (upon request) and the Student Health fee (for duplicate coverage) will be made only by a credit to your account. When your account has a credit balance because of cash overpayment (the University owes you), a check will be mailed to you. Normally, there will be a three-week waiting period before the refund is authorized.

CANCELLATION OF REGISTRATION

At the beginning of each semester, your registration will be cancelled if all past-due amounts and the first installment for tuition and fees have not been paid by the cancellation deadline.

WAIVER OF CANCELLATION

Those students who are experiencing a delay in the receipt of verified financial aid can avoid the cancellation of registration by requesting a cancellation waiver through the Office of Student Work and Financial Assistance. There is no charge for a cancellation waiver. However, if the full amount for registration fees is not paid before the final installment is due, then the student will be subject to the charges for the installment plan.

QUESTIONS AND ERRORS

By keeping the detailed transaction portion of your monthly billing statement you will have a convenient record of your business with the University. If you find an error on the statement, bring that to the attention of the Bursar's Office. Questions about specific charges may be referred to the office responsible for that service transaction.

Conference meet bid is goal of polo squad

By Michelle Schwent
Staff Writer

It was do or die for the Saluki water polo squad this weekend as the team had to win all three of its matches at an Indiana tournament to qualify for the Midwest Conference Tournament Nov. 8-9.

The Salukis came up a game short, defeating Illinois and Purdue but losing to Indiana, but still have a shot at playing in the tournament.

SIU-C is in seventh place in the Midwest Conference with a record of 3-6. The conference allows only the top six teams to play in the tournament.

Missouri-Rolla is second in that conference and first in the Mississippi Valley Conference. SIU-C plays Rolla in the round-robin Mississippi Valley tournament Nov. 1. Should the Salukis beat Rolla, they will gain another Midwest Conference victory and a chance to play in the Midwest Tournament after all.

In Coach Bob Steele's way of thinking, a victory over Rolla would make SIU-C the unofficial conference champs.

"Rolla beat Loyola and Loyola beat Indiana," Steele said. "If we beat Rolla, that makes us the unofficial conference champs. We held Rolla to a 9-9 score for three quarters the last time we played them. We would really like to beat them because we are just now putting it all together."

SIU-C dumped Illinois, 15-9, in the first game. Conrado Porta and Mike Welch scored four goals each. Mark Pollard scored three goals and Jim Knibbs and Tim Plantz had two each.

"That was a nice win," Steele said. "They beat us 17-9 earlier this year."

The Salukis beat Purdue 15-8 in the second match as Porta scored five goals, Welch three and Pollard and Knibbs two each.

The third game was a battle for the Salukis as Indiana's B team won 17-15.

"We fought back to tie the game twice," Steele said. "They scored three quick goals on us and we couldn't catch them again. We just couldn't stop one guy on their team."

Porta took the scoring honors again with five goals and Welch added two more. Porta leads the team in scoring with 51 goals. Knibbs has 29. Plantz 23 and Welch 21.

Steele installed a new offense which he thinks contributed to the team's weekend success. "We have a pretty good swimming team and use a swimming offense to wear down the other team," he said. "We have two 'hole men' who position in front of the goal and have three drivers to bring the ball up and try to get the ball to one of the hole men. Most teams have just one hole man but we use two."

"No other team uses this offense, but I think it is best for our kids. It allows us to capitalize on mistakes. Indiana saw us play two games using this offense, so we'll have to fit some other ideas in to it."

Steele and his Salukis would like a chance to play in the Midwest Tournament because of the progress the rookie team has made since the beginning of the season.

"The kids would get discouraged when they would lose, but they never gave up," he said. "There are two swimmers plus Fischer (Tim) in goal and the rest are all non-competitive swimmers who have played water polo in high school. Playing, practicing and just being together has helped them. They wanted to play better and they did play a lot better this weekend."

Lady golfers' future seems bright despite dismal fall season finish

By Rick Klatt

Staff Writer
Leaves are changing colors, southerly breezes are northerly gusts and the lady golfers take 19th place in a field of 22. Does women's golf Coach Mary Beth McGirr need more, or better, reasons to call it quits for the fall?

Not really. So in spite of the changing climatic conditions and the obviously unattractive finish at last week's Georgia Invitational, the second-year coach isn't the least bit rushed to tell the Salukis "wait until next year."

"We'll keep playing as long as the weather holds out," McGirr said. "Then we'll move indoors for weight training and a little practice."

The disappointing finish at Georgia, plus the 10th place recorded at the Midwest Regional tournament four days earlier, hang like dark clouds over a very productive season.

Sure, the Salukis lost a sudden-death playoff to Northern Illinois and hence the state championship they held for two consecutive years. But they played well in the preceding tournaments, which leads to the reason why the players and McGirr aren't reaching for a hockey stick instead of the nine-iron.

The Salukis are young—seven freshmen and one junior college transfer hardly qualify as welfare recipients—and that fact, McGirr believes, was a major factor in SIU-C's downfall in pressure situations.

"You have to have experience," McGirr said, "and that's one thing everyone got. This team is going to get so much better as they get more and more experience."

Freshmen Barb Anderson, Sue Arbugast and Dania Meador are the Salukis nucleus, according to McGirr. She said they are the mainstays of the team and will have their positions no matter who enters the scene in the next year.

"The other three," McGirr said in reference to Tracy Keller, Lisa Rottman and Lavon Seabolt, "have improved tremendously and will be able to use the winter to work on their swings."

"It's hard to start changing swings in August," McGirr, who became a teaching professional prior to the fall semester, said. "So the time between seasons (the Salukis play in the spring, also) is the time I can work on changes that I feel can help."

McGirr believes the loss at the state championship was of particular importance for the team.

"It was good for them in a way," she said. "Many of the players came here as high school stars, so the loss was quite a humbling experience."

"Next time they'll appreciate it so much more if they win it," she added. "It's awful to say losing is good, but it put them into their place in a way."

McGirr's confidence toward the Salukis' potential is evident in her recruiting plans. She feels the Salukis need only one player.

"I'm convinced that what we've got here already is good," McGirr said. "I'd rather go with what we've got because I feel it's just a matter of time."

"Plus this isn't really a strong senior high school class," she added. "The stronger players are sophomores and juniors."

Kansas City strives to survive

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP)—Going into Game Six of the World Series, the Kansas City Royals' situation is far from enviable. They face possible elimination; they face a Philadelphia crowd and they face the National League's best pitcher, Steve Carlton.

The sixth game of the Series will be played at Veterans Stadium in Philadelphia Tuesday night with a seventh game, if necessary, Wednesday night. The Phillies will start Carlton, baseball's premier hurler, Tuesday against Kansas City right-hander Rich Gale.

"Now we have their backs against the wall," Phillies third baseman Mike Schmidt said. "They have to win two in our place, and it's not going to be easy."

The Phillies took a 3-2 Series lead Sunday in Kansas City via a ninth-inning rally sparked by pinch hitter Del Unser. Unser stroked a double, his third hit in six at-bats during the Series, to tie the game at 3-3 in the ninth inning, then scored the winning run for a 4-3 victory that backed the Royals into a deep, dark corner.

Carlton, a 24-game winner during the season, is making his second Series start. He went eight innings to win the second game. Still, he yielded three earned runs on 10 hits.

"It's always tough when you see a guy the first time," Royals third baseman George Brett said. "Maybe it won't be as tough, now that we've seen Carlton."

Gale also will be making his second start of the Series. He started Game Three with no decision in a 4-1-3 inning.

"I said before that we were going to have to beat Steve Carlton to win this thing," Gale said. "Now, we're at that point. We either beat Carlton or lose it in six."

Freshmen? 'Kids' play ball like seniors

By Scott Stahmer
Associate Sports Editor

Someone must have forgotten to tell Rob Kirsner and Vincent Wiggins how freshmen basketball players are supposed to perform.

No signs of first-year jitters were apparent in Sunday's Maroon-White basketball scrimmage. The veteran-heavy White team won, 61-57, but Kirsner and Wiggins, the recruits from Lafayette High School in Brooklyn, N.Y., turned in decidedly un-freshmanlike performances for the Maroon.

Kirsner, a 6-1½ point guard, scored just seven points but set up several Maroon baskets with his passing and penetration. Several times, Kirsner confused the White defense by driving toward the basket, then dishing off to a forward or center.

"One thing we liked when we recruited him was that he could penetrate and pass at the same time," Saluki Coach Joe Gottfried said. "It gives him another dimension that he can penetrate and pass without breaking stride. You look back at his play and you can't remember him making many mistakes."

Wiggins, 6-10 and 230 pounds, scored 16 points and grabbed six rebounds while battling underneath against the White's Rod Camp.

"He's got a nose for the ball," Gottfried said of Wiggins. "He's not afraid to bang around underneath and he's one of those players who always thinks rebound. On an offensive rebound, he'll go to the hole."

Camp was the White's No. 2 scorer with 15, with Darnall Jones leading with 17. Charles Moore contributing 14 and junior college transfer Johnny Fayne adding 10. For the Maroon, Edward Thomas had 12, Jac Chiatt 10 and walk-on Lindsay Ledbetter eight.

Jones, a 6-3 sophomore swingman from Olney, surprised the 500 or so fans in attendance by swishing jump shots from the 15-foot range.

"He's been shooting like that every day since he came to campus, so he did not really surprise us," Gottfried said. "He's been very consistent on a day-by-day basis."

Gottfried was happy with Camp's offensive output, but was concerned that the Maroon centers scored 28 points against him. It was Camp's first Saluki performance after sitting out last season with a transcript problem.

"He's got the ability to score from the foul line and around the basket," the coach said. "We're looking for him to score on the inside, but you've got to balance that out with good defense. The Maroon had 28 points on the inside and that's far too many. The scoring from the center position was a like and a dislike."

"For having worked out only three days, I thought we played pretty well," Gottfried said.
